What makes this font unique is the fact that it has a quite subtle arrangement of uppercase letters over a white background, and lowercase letters are shown on a black background. Although the font was developed to support Asian languages (Chinese, Japanese, Russian, etc.), it can also be used for English text. Richard, I am waiting for you to ask whether you have the details for your meetings with Rob Milnthorp and Joe Sanguedolce. Regarding the Bridge loan to TMPRC, I would use Enron Canada Corp.'s wire account at the Bank of Montreal, with the local office of the BMO instructing the Canadian Treasury Department to wire the funds to Enron Corp. (Houston) in New York, NY. Richard B Sanders@ECT 03/23/2000 06:22 AM To: Mark - ECT Legal Taylor/HOU/ECT@ECT cc: Subject: TMPRC I can't find the effective date for the Credit Agreement between TMPRC and Enron Canada Corp. (I assumed it would be the date of the execution) but it looks like the effective date has not yet occurred. Can you point me in the direction of the pertinent information. Also, do you have any insight into the type of credit support that Enron Corp. has proposed to give TMPRC? You mentioned that there are some tax issues. I am not sure what that means. Does it matter?Q: DDD and Service Fabric communication I know that my question has been asked numerous times before but I was unable to find a good answer to my question. Here is my goal. I have a hub service and 2 other services. I need to allow the services to communicate with the hub service using API calls and when the service sends an event to the hub service I also want the hub service to expose that event to the other services via API calls. My service will be implemented using both EF and normal C#. I am using SQL Server and Entity Framework and I was planning on using SQL Server for the hub services. I really want to avoid using some sort of message exchange pattern and communicate via messages. The goal is to write less code and focus more on business logic. What is the best practice for implementing this type
