Converting images One way that you can make your digital images look more professional is to export them into another format.

The most common way to do this is to convert the image file from one format to another. This way, you can use a program to perform actions that you couldn't with the original data. In fact, the process of converting a RAW file to a JPEG is a good way to get a quick look at what your images look like without worrying about the quality. In the next section, we show you how to perform a number of file conversions from one format to another. We've included specific instructions for the most common camera models:

Q: Why won't my MySQLIOPopup button work when I have a MySQLIOPopup2? Apologies to whoever may have answered this; you have no idea how exhaustive my Google has been. I've looked at loads of examples and done the following: Checked that I have MySQLIOWrapper.php in the standard location. Checked that I have PHP 4_01_02. Checked that I have required the correct number of files (I have the include_once thingie). Oh, and I'm using an SSL connection on the mysql.php file on the server. I'm using a standard MySQLIOPopup button like so: This works fine. I now have a different problem; I need a button that opens the login popup. To do this I have the same button in my file as above, but with a different ID of login2. The login2 button works fine too: This works fine. However, if I go to the page to add the login2 button, it comes up with an error like this: Fatal error: Call to undefined function mysqli_connect() in [path]\mysql\mysql.php on line 43 If you have a spare minute to consider this, I would really appreciate it. Update (25/08/11): Things I've tried: Tried "just in case" linking to a different server for my mysql.php. Tried older versions of MySQLIOPopup. Tried not including anything that is apparently "optional". Tried not including include_once. Changed my MySQL module name from "mysql" to "mysqli". Tried a different version of PHP, 4_03_00. Checked that there are no white spaces anywhere. When I put "Show errors;" at the top, it says "Warning: Division by zero in ..." etc. I have tried loading different versions of PHP, 4_01_02, 4_03_00, etc. This sometimes means the program hangs and doesn't do anything
