and Internet use, work and play time of specific users, and export information into easily read files for your management. The computer timer application can monitor use in a network or on a local computer. Microsoft released Windows Vista a few months ago, and millions of people have begun to work on their computers and Internet usage. This very dedicated application is helping many users find out how much time and Internet resources they've spent over the last day, month or even longer. Computer Timer has been developed with user data protection and privacy in mind. Users can track, measure or export data from their computers and the Internet usage over a period of time. You can choose to make this information accessible to other users, only for the user who logged in, just for the current session, or just for the user's private log file. This is helpful for companies wanting to see how much time and Internet resources their employees have spent, or individuals wanting to track their Internet use. Since there's no cost for the product, many people do so to find out about their Internet usage and time. Staying secure In addition to logging and tracking the computer and Internet usage, Computers Timer keeps track of who's logging on and off to the computer in real time. This allows users to avoid logging on or off. The application also automatically logs off when the computer screen goes off, locks the screen, or when it's been inactive for more than a period of time. A password can be required for log-in when signing off from the computer, or an optional group log file can be created. The application also enables you to set the time in which user's activities in the computer can be viewed, logged, or monitored. Any connection of the computer to the Internet can be logged, as well as the start and end time for that connection. The data can be exported to a variety of file formats including CSV, HTML and XLS. There's also a functioning search feature with user-entered criteria. You can also choose to just see the activity of certain users, or keep track of multiple user activity in a group. The Compq Computer Timer software is a useful application that enables you to keep track of your computer's usage. A built in security measure allows you to b7e8fdf5c8
