Adobe doesn't make a copy of Photoshop. Users can download and use the entire package for a fee of between $200 and $400. In addition to Photoshop's Illustrator graphics software, there are also Adobe's other graphics programs. Photoshop is one of the leading image editing programs on the market and is often used by computer graphics professionals and amateurs alike. The program is designed to enhance images. Photoshop features can be powerful, as you can be able to transform even photographs into amazing prints. Making Photoshop even more powerful, however, is that there are several different versions of the program, each with variations in features. This way of marketing the program means that you may need to learn about new features in different programs, as the versions you learn in the beginning may not be the newest available versions. On this page, we'll walk you through Photoshop basic features, as well as some more advanced features. The section on the left is for the basic features. We'll list the advanced features on the right. Adjustments Adobe uses icons on its toolbars to indicate the various features for the program. You can click on the icons to see the icons in their toolbar locations. Hair and Face: One of the most common things you do when editing your images is to change the appearance of your subject's hair and/or face. There are many tools in the Adjustments area for doing just this. Fill Light: This feature allows you to change the brightness of the lighting of the object you are editing. Lightening it to the right will make it brighter; lightening it to the left will make it darker. Select the Fill Light tool and click on the image or object you want to adjust. Blur/Sharpen: With this feature, you can sharpen or blur the texture of your image. Sharpening is a way to make your subject's eyes appear more brilliant and the blur is a way of softening the edges of the object in your photo. Select the Blur/Sharpen tool and click on the object or image you want to apply the effect to. B&W: This tool is used to convert the image to black and white. It doesn't matter how the original was in color; it just means that the image is one color - black and white. Liquify: This tool works with the texture and color of the object. The liquify tool allows you to smooth and deform the

Q: Use values from text file into my while loop I have a simple while loop which display a list of objects on a page. {% for article in articles %} {{ article.title }} {{ article.content }} {% endfor %} This output list of articles in order. There are several records in the database (31 records), so the list will show 31 records in order. I have a text file named articles.txt which contains the names of the records in the database: John Luke I want to use this text file in my loop instead of 31 records. How can I do it? A: def create_articles_list(): articles_str = """John Luke Richard Alec John John John Richard John John Richard John Alec John John

Q: python compare dates from two lists? I have two lists of dates e.g. 2014-06-30 2014-06-30 2014-07-01 2014-06-30 2014-06-30 2014-07-01 2014-07-01 I have a function, which will take two dates and return True/False, if the dates are different. def difference(a, b): if a == b: return False a = datetime.datetime.strptime(a, "%Y-%m-%d") b = datetime.datetime.strptime(b, "%Y-%m-%d") days_diff = a - b days_add = (b - a).days if days_add!= days_diff: return True else: return False but this compares them like 2014-07-01 - 2014-06-30 2014-07-01 - 2014-07-01 2014-07-01 - 2014-07-01 ... and I am getting 2014-07-01 - 2014-06-30 2014-07-01 - 2014-07-01 2014-07-01 - 2014-07-01 ... This is currently not workable, as some dates are not the same, but also not not equal. Is there a way to avoid this in python? A: To avoid the creation of datetime objects (which is expensive and slows things down), do not parse the date before comparing them. Use str.split and str.splitlines() (new in Python 3.0). >>> dates = ["2014-06-30", "2014-06-30", "2014-07-01", "2014-06-30", "2014-06-30", "2014-07-01", "2014-07-01"] >>> new_dates = [date.strip() for date in dates.splitlines()] >>> dates ['2014-06-30', '2014-06-30', '2014-07-01', '2014-06-30
