Genetic control of ethanol metabolism in mice: evidence for a major genetic influence. Male C57BL/6J x C3H/HeJ F1 mice were tested for their capacity to metabolize ethanol to acetaldehyde by the inhalation of ethanol vapor over a range of concentrations between 35 and 175 mg/L. Each mouse was exposed to a single concentration of ethanol vapor, and the latency to death and the incidence of death at each exposure level were recorded for 60 min. When exposed to a water control, all mice died within 15 min. However, when exposed to ethanol vapor, a murine strain widely regarded as ethanol-sensitive (C57BL/6J) were partially protected from ethanol toxicity when exposed to 75 or 175 mg/L ethanol vapor, and these animals survived for up to 50 min. The ethanol-tolerant strain (C3H/HeJ) were more sensitive than C57BL/6J mice, in that all mice died after only 30 min of exposure to 175 mg/L ethanol. b7e8fdf5c8

Paxos Single/Dual Routing Switch - RCS Paxos Single/Dual Routing Switch - RCS The RPaxos Single/Dual Routing Switch is used to cut for Single and Dual Channel Installing of these switches is easy, should be able to motor(not in the picture) to Axis so there is only single or double of the Axis that is installed to RPaxos is for switching of the PCM output to different inputs or OUTPUTS but in easy to use buttons has over/under "conditions" switches which can be used to filter out unwanted frequencies of either channel and if the switch is switched to the "Under" or "Over" position It will eliminate frequencies from the (dual) channel and also when you switch it to the "Off" position - it will shut off the output - which is great if you are cable assembly on it - and its the right way to do it also
