A: With Max, you have to put a plane on the bottom of the floor. That plane is at the same z position as the floor, and it's opaque. You must put a lower Z level for a transparent floor, if you need a transparent floor. You cannot add a floor, and then add textures to the floor after it's added. A texture and a floor must be on the same level, including Z. A: When using Multi-Material, you must have applied the floor material to your floor objects. This can be done with a Properties shelf or in the Material Editor. Once the Material is applied, floor objects will not be visible and will be selected by the Floor material. In this episode of Media Break, Brad Flanders shares his weekly thoughts on television and the media landscape. What do we talk about? We talk about the ways that streaming services are impacting TV, whether Netflix is actually hurting people who are still subscribing to cable, what the future of TV looks like, why the viewership numbers are so dismal for late-night television, what live sports will look like in ten years, what the future of digital advertising is, and much more. In a nutshell -Brad is worried about the missing opportunity that cable has (and will have) left on the rest of the television landscape -he's looking at the rise of streaming services like Netflix and has concerns about what they may end up doing to TV -if you're a cord-cutter, it's hard to find comfort in anything at this point, and it's still an uphill battle to get to TV's future -Brad says that there will be one network in ten years that will be primarily digital (at least in the US) -Brad thinks we will see a decrease in live sports, with more and more games being available on TV, on the internet, and on mobile devices What have I been watching? -Brad says he's been watching a lot of Final Fantasy XIV on the PlayStation 4 -Brad recommends that you listen to this episode while you're playing the game What have I been writing? -Brad recommends a few podcasts: Serial, This American Life, The Big podcast, and The Smartest Person in the Room What I'm looking forward to? -Brad says that he'

Hence, by Lemma [lb], $\dim(P_n) \leq n$. We may assume, therefore, that there exists a g -polytope $Q \subseteq \text{int}(R)^n$ with $\dim(Q) \geq n+1$, $Q \subseteq P$ and $\dim(Q) = \dim(P)$. By Remark [rear], Q is decomposable. Now we are left to show that Q cannot be a proper polytope 3da54e8ca3
