Napping brothers, who lost dad in Bahamas, fly across country to see dad's funeral EUROPEAN CITY -- Sixto and Julio Caceres are six years old, but still wear their trademark bow ties, sit side by side at the dinner table and sometimes even have matching smiles. The two big brothers talk in fluent English and Spanish with their parents, and often, their siblings. They show a high interest in the news and sports. But Julio doesn't talk about what happened to their father. The boys live in Oahu, Hawaii with their mom, three sisters and grandmother. Their dad, Cesar Caceres, drowned two years ago in the Bahamas, where he was vacationing with his wife and kids. The family has had a hand in opening the doors for more immigrants to the U.S., and there are fears Caceres' death may be a warning sign for others like him who travel with families, not single adults. Sixto and Julio do not remember much of their father. They were 6 and 3 years old, respectively, at the time of his death. Their mother has been pushing them to share about it, slowly. "Every time we see each other, they are going to ask, 'Did Dad tell you what he went through in the Bahamas?' And I have to tell them, 'He's not here right now,' " recalls Celia Caceres, who was pregnant with Sixto at the time of her husband's death. "It's been tough, but I'm pretty comfortable saying it was for the best." Cilia Caceres, a nurse, and a cousin of the sisters went to the Bahamas with their son and the uncle, Jairo Caceres. The group had just left his wife and two children in Hawaii, where Jairo Caceres' wife, Marcela, was living with the Caceres girls in the same house. The uncle brought the boys to the Bahamas with him and they lived with him at a lodge. But the uncle's wife and daughter stayed home to handle the girls while the men vacationed. No one told the kids what happened to their father until they returned home to Hawaii on Feb. 18, the Caceres' 54th wedding anniversary. "It was like a ghost came in our bedroom, and he said, 'Your dad is sleeping over in the bed next to mine.'

A long-term follow-up study of 86 Norwegian patients with HLA-B27 positive ankylosing spondylitis. To determine the long-term outcome of 86 Norwegian patients with ankylosing spondylitis with a mean follow-up of 16 years. A total of 86 patients were contacted and of these 79 responded. Six patients had died, and four could not be contacted. In addition, six patients who were followed for at least 20 years and fulfilled the Aspen criteria for definite ankylosing spondylitis were included to evaluate long-term outcome. Seventy-eight per cent of the patients answered "yes" to the question "Were you still incapacitated?" at follow-up. The median duration of disease was 14 years. Reoccurrence of symptoms was frequent during follow-up. However, 44% had never experienced spondylitis exacerbations (SPA) and 31% had had SPA in at least one follow-up. Only 16% reported on at least one major exacerbation. The number of SPA correlated to disability. In spite of an overall decline in disability the Danish AS Association/Patient's Forum-modified Bath Index (MBI) score remained in between the first and third quartiles of age- and sex-matched healthy controls. Fifty-six patients (72%) were completely free of any symptoms of AS. However, of the 22 patients who reported at least one symptom of AS at follow-up, 16 had experienced symptoms of AS prior to the study. Patients with HLA-B27 positive AS have a favorable long-term outcome. The majority of patients experience SPA.opinion Letters to the editor for May 2, 2013 To the editor: Thank you for publishing a commentary by Rep. Rick Rubin that provides reasons why the Colorado National Guard would be better used now to protect the residents of Aurora than deploying them to the Middle East. Rep. Rubin does a great job of explaining not only the additional cost of the deployment for the Guard, but also how sending these brave men and women to the Middle East could impact our military needs in the future. Thank you to the reader for commenting. Rep. Rick Rubin Aurora To the editor: Thank you for printing the letter I wrote to state Rep. Mark Waller, requesting that you sit down with the governor and agree to an appropriations package for next fiscal year for the bulk of the state's
