Q: Google Analytics - Landing page to other page in the same web site I want to track all my page visits in Google Analytics, but one page of my web site have two sections as a landing page and after I go to the second section of the same web site. Is it possible to track the visit from landing page to the second section or create another custom dimension to identify two different pages? A: You should actually have two separate pages. Landing page and the actual page that contains the content you actually want to track. They both would have different URLs, and you could even change the URL if you want. Once you have two different pages you can use custom dimensions in Google Analytics to tell Analytics which page the visitor came from. Full answer: Create a completely new page. Add your content to this new page. Create a separate form on this new page which posts to your other page. On this form, add custom dimension information so it contains the information you want to track. Track the custom dimension with a Goal for the form submission. You should now have two different pages which have a custom dimension, allowing you to pull the data in Analytics. If your HTML is rendered as normal, you could use JavaScript to add the custom dimension from the first page. If your second page is a separate HTML file you could use HTML5 push state. The present invention relates to a display panel device such as a liquid crystal display device. As liquid crystal display devices, such as liquid crystal television sets, are widely used, the resolution of such display devices is becoming higher year by year. To satisfy such demands, a display device which has a high resolution and realizes high brightness has been developed. As a typical technique for realizing the high resolution and the high brightness, the technique of enlarging the picture element region is known. According to this technique, a plurality of picture element regions having a relatively small number of picture elements are arrayed, to form a single picture element region having a relatively large number of picture elements. In this technique, a silicon thin film transistor is formed on a glass substrate as an active device by using a thin film technology. However, when thin film transistors are formed in a number of picture elements by using the thin film technology as described above, the following problems arise. (1) Since a number of picture element regions are arrayed, it is difficult to provide the picture element regions with good conductivity

A: You can try an online Delphi to Java IDE that provide simple online Delphi to Java code mapping. Note: this service work on Windows, but should work on Delphi XE. Here is the tool I've used for this purpose. . Kabul: Afghanistan's deputy attorney general said Monday that President Hamid Karzai cannot be prosecuted in the United States because of the country's rule of law. The comment could add a layer of complication to a stalemate between Karzai and lawmakers on appointing a new attorney general for the war-torn country. Hajji Hashem Khorasani said "Afghanistan is a democratic country, and the president has immunity," after answering questions from a panel of lawmakers during a session of the lower house of parliament. Khorasani, an outspoken parliamentarian, is one of the president's top deputies. The parliament panel was trying to figure out the legal provisions in Afghanistan to rule on whether Karzai can be prosecuted in the U.S. on war crimes charges, but the maneuver was blocked by one of his legislative allies. If the solution to one data breach, or a series of data breaches, is more monitoring of data privacy, it is time for Canada to stop pointing the finger at the United States for the lack of US data breaches and instead start paying attention to the many data breaches that occur in Canada. From the now hundreds of reported data breaches, only the most egregious ones come to our attention. Under the spotlight: Canada and the United States Every time there is a data breach, some journalist points their finger at Canada and the US, and not the perpetrators of the breach. We now know that criminals have breached the personal information of millions of Canadian citizens since at least 2001. Then, last year, it was revealed that Canadians were among the hundreds of millions of records leaked to the public from a database at an HP subsidiary
