the market. On the one hand, this gives rise to a plurality of applications which are able to operate on the basis of the above-mentioned operating systems. On the other hand, this also enables an already existing application to operate on a plurality of different operating systems. The integration of a plurality of applications and operating systems on the same device or machine is frequently referred to as cloud computing. The generation of a cloud service requires not only a plurality of applications, but also a corresponding operating system. For this purpose, various cloud services are currently offered on the market, which enable the operating system to be expanded. In particular, the system administrator has to be prepared for the generation of an operating system for cloud computing with a plurality of applications. Various information technologies are currently available, with which the system administrator can generate an operating system for cloud computing, as well as various applications, from which the installation may be carried out. An example of an operating system which can be used in this connection is Microsoft Windows 10.
